

Dark Money Group Gave Anti-340B PAC Nearly $5M in 2024, Influential PR Firm Raked in Over $300,000

Building America’s Future (BAF), a powerful conservative dark money group with ties to the Trump administration, contributed almost $5 million in 2024 to a political action committee (PAC) that ran misleading ads opposing state 340B contract pharmacy access bills, which sought to link the 340B program to illegal immigration and other hot-button issues, according to new campaign finance filings.

Stand for US PAC reported receiving a total of more than $4.8 million from BAF, a Washington, D.C.-based 501(c)(4) nonprofit that does not disclose its donors, last year—contributions which accounted for nearly all of the committee’s $4.87 million funding total in 2024, according to its year-end Federal Election Commission (FEC) filings due Jan. 31. The PAC spent more than $4.84 million during the 12-month period—primarily on misleading 340B ads targeting GOP lawmakers who supported contract pharmacy access bills—to end the year with a $29,000 cash balance.

The PAC’s year-end filing came shortly after BAF launched a new video ad campaign targeting contract pharmacy access bills introduced in four traditionally conservative states—Nebraska, Utah, Kentucky and North Dakota—in 2025. The ad, which drew swift criticism from 340B provider advocates, claims that the 340B program “subsidizes healthcare for illegal aliens and gender transitions for kids.”

BAF and Stand for US PAC have both employed Katie Miller, a principal at Washington, D.C.-based P2 Public Affairs and the spokesperson for Robert F. Kennedy Jr.’s bid for Health and Human Services (HHS) secretary. Miller, the wife of Stephen Miller—Trump’s highly influential White House deputy chief of staff for policy and vocal immigration hawk—is set to eventually join President Donald Trump’s (R) new Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE).

Katie Miller's co-worker at P2 Public Affairs, Katherine Neal, is also listed as Building America's Future's executive director in the group's latest tax filing.

Katie Miller did not respond to 340B Report's request for comment on Stand for US PAC's year-end filing.

Filing Details

BAF gave Stand for US PAC $30,000 on Dec. 2—its only contribution during the reporting period, which covered Nov. 26 through Dec. 31, 2024, according to the PAC's FEC filing.

BAF accounted for nearly all of Stand for Us PAC's fundraising in 2024, contributing a total of $4.83 million—most of which occurred between April and the end of July, according to FEC data. The group also reportedly funneled tens of millions of dollars into PACs supporting Trump's 2024 presidential campaign.

BAF does not list its donors on its website and is not required to disclose its funding as a registered 501(c)(4). However, the Wall Street Journal reported that billionaire Elon Musk, whom Trump has selected to lead DOGE, has made substantial contributions to BAF since 2022.

BAF's efforts had largely flown under the radar until recently. The New York Times reported on the organization's pro-Trump efforts in October and the Salt Lake City Tribune reported on its anti-340 Utah ad buy in late January. A political consultant who reportedly worked Musk told the Salt Lake Tribune that it's unlikely that dismantling the 340B program is a priority for Musk.

Stand for US PAC, meanwhile, reported spending $25,276 during the year-end filing period—$20,000 of which went to P2 Public Affairs for “political strategy consulting,” according to FEC data. That's in addition to the $288,000-plus Stand for US PAC paid P2 Public Affairs between Jan. 1 and November 25, 2024.

Anti-340B Efforts

Most of the PAC’s 2024 spending—about $3.8 million disbursed over June and July 2024—went to M2 Placement LLC, a Denver-based firm for “radio/TV media placement,” according to FEC filings. It also paid Florida-based public opinion research organization Tyson Group more than $131,000 for polling. Ryan Tyson, president and CEO of Tyson Group, also works at P2 Public Affairs.

Efforts in conservative media to pressure Virginia Gov. Glenn Youngkin (R) to oppose a 340B contract pharmacy access bill that would have restored 340B pricing to federal grantees in the contract pharmacy setting cited Tyson Group’s polling. Youngkin ultimately vetoed the bill last year despite its near-unanimous bipartisan support in the legislature, a move which Virginia health centers denounced.

Stand for US PAC and BAF have run ads in multiple states attacking Republican state lawmakers who supported 340B contract pharmacy access legislation, claiming the 340B program “subsidizes healthcare for illegals.”

In West Virginia, a key Republican lawmaker told 340B Report last year that he was considering legal action against Stand for US PAC because it “lied to the people of West Virginia” about the 340B program and the reasons for his primary election loss. Meanwhile, in Missouri, Stand for US PAC spent millions in 2024 supporting a failed gubernatorial bid from a candidate who vowed to “repeal 340B.”
